

Empower Your People

Training is an essential element of any task, process and indeed, organisation. The implementation of new software and the introduction of new systems, not accompanied by adequate training, can erode confidence and productivity of most employees. Therefore, in order to ensure you maximise your IT investment, you need to give your team the tools needed to fully utilise your system. At Wolf Consultancy we have all the skills and practical experience to provide your organisation with the training needed to align your employees with any new application or systems introduced, leaving you with happier, more productive individuals.

Giving your employees the skills needed to succeed

Increased productivity

At Wolf Consultancy we pride ourselves on our ability to offer effective training in areas such as Microsoft applications, the internet and all other aspects of PC use and user systems. We provide the flexibility of delivering packaged or bespoke training courses on your premises, or at one of our specially selected training centres. Our courses can be targeted at users from every level, whether beginners requiring an introductory programme or intermediates.

Our courses are insightful and jargon free and promise to not only relax and guide your employees through a comprehensive programme, but also give them the skills and the confidence to completely fulfil their role within your organisation and increase their productivity. Furthermore, our desire to become a valuable member of your organisation ensures that we take every measure possible to offer effective training solutions that fully meet your requirements, and liberate your employees' time.

One-On-One

Individuals who may be lagging behind more accomplished colleagues in terms of technical ability will benefit from the close personal attention of this programme. A qualified personal tutor will instruct and work on a close level to ensure that everyone in your organisation has the skills needed to succeed. Whether it is an employee who is not as IT savvy as others, or an important individual who needs further skills, Wolf Consultancy will empower your team.

Team Training

A new system or software implementation could leave a serious skills shortage within your office. Your team may have had a number of unskilled new starters or you maybe offering a programme of continual training. Similarly, you may have had employees leave or retire without transferring skill sets. Whatever the obstacle, if you need to increase the skill level of the workers within your office then Wolf Consultancy's team training courses is the answer. This more rigid course will introduce your team to a qualified instructor who will present them with a syllabus designed to achieve the most effective results. They will also receive close personal attention if needed.

"Wolf Consultancy are always on the end of the phone ready to solve our problems."

Christine Lambert, Operations Director 'Beamish Transport'

Training

